a terrific experience

I'VE BEEN SENDING FRIENDS TO CHINA FUN on Second Avenue since I discovered the fabulous Shanghai brunch with pork-and-leek dumplings, zingy soybean soup, and crisp fried crullers to fold into sesame-flavored. So I was first in line when a high-tech outpost opened in my own backyard. Tonight's platter of Cantonese barbecued meats dispatched from the open kitchen astonishes. The pork, sweetly caramelized, almost burned, never better. The chicken, juicy and real. The duck, crisp-skinned, with a thin layer of fat to relish or scrape away. And the dumplings are a bite—crystal shrimp in noodle wrap, a luscious shrimp-chicken-and-pork-studded sticky rice roll with a chic nori sash, and a shrimp mince with its own small mushroom cap. Custard-soft bean curd with "1,000-year-old egg" is not to everyone's taste. I love it, salty as it is. And the scallion pancake will do. So it's shocking that, except for the eggplant and a quick loss of Chinese hooch (not on the menu), all the stir-fries I've tasted lack pizzazz. For now, I'll stick to BBQ, dim sum, and Mandarin-noodle soup—all at prices to please the budgeteer. And on days I deserve it, I'll permit myself a major indulgence: one oozing bite of the sweet sesame-and-peanut-butter pancake.

China Fun, 246 Columbus Avenue, near 71st Street (320-1516). Sunday through Wednesday 11 a.m. to midnight, Thursday through Saturday till 1 a.m. A.E. M.C. V. JULY 25, 1994/NEW YORK .35

Share a $22.95 tasting dinner for two ($12.95 for one) at the West Side's China Fun—seven favorite dim sum for each of you, then a sampler of the roast pork, chicken, duck, and spare ribs, a choice of four entrées, and almond gelatin with mixed fruit for dessert.

The Original
Chinatown Ice Cream Factory

The origins of ice cream are both mythical and abstract, including legends attributing the invention of ice cream to the Chinese during the Tang Dynasty. Despite its unclear beginnings, the Chinatown Ice Cream Factory (CICF) has made ice cream a tangible and undeniably delicious reality! By coalescing America's most popular dessert with an exotic Chinese twist, Philip Seid demonstrates a unique entrepreneurship in establishing CICF. Having been in existence for over 26 years, CICF stands today as one of Chinatown's oldest businesses, and is often referred to as an unofficial landmark. CICF continues its tradition of being a family run operation, with a new generation of Seid ice cream makers, including Philip's daughters Christina and Katherine. What's the secret to our delectable frozen products? The answer is simple: ice cream making is in our genes.
